THE Enquirer is not the only independent, student-run news website in Singapore.
Two years ago, The Campus Observer was formed by a group of students from the National University of Singapore (NUS).
It is written and edited entirely by the students.
Campus Observer executive editor Belmont Lay, 24, said: "The fact that more student-run websites are coming up shows the desire of students to be part of a participatory culture in society. I foresee more such websites coming up in the future."
NUS has a magazine funded by the Students' Union, called The Ridge. It is published once a month during the school term.

"Enquiring" undergrads (from left) Lin Junjie, Chong Zi Liang and Mohammed Zakaria Zainal Azman, all 23, launched their news website earlier this month.
