Era of Western domination is ending

Source: The Straits Times, Review, pA21
date: 29 November 2011

By CHOEING SOK-WAI
SENIOR WRITER

A gathering of thought leaders, including the great leaders of the world’s 100 top thinkers, alongside including some of the most prominent individuals in the world, has been launched. The first meeting, held in Singapore, was attended by prominent figures from around the world. The meeting was held in response to the recent events in the Middle East, which have caused great concern among the international community.

Singapore can be intellectual capital of Asia

The meeting was convened to address the challenges facing the world today. The participants discussed a range of issues, including the need for greater cooperation and dialogue among nations. They also called for increased investment in education and research, as well as greater support for the arts and culture.

One of the key themes discussed was the role of Singapore in the region. The participants agreed that Singapore has a unique position as a hub for innovation and creativity, and that it should continue to play a leading role in the region.

Another important topic was the need for more effective global governance. The participants called for a stronger United Nations, as well as greater cooperation among the major powers. They also emphasized the importance of addressing climate change and other pressing global challenges.

The meeting concluded with a call for greater collaboration among the world’s leaders, and a commitment to working together to build a more peaceful and prosperous future for all.