Varsity town to be ready in August next year

LIVE with a diverse group of students and participate in discussions while earning school credits.

In August next year, students at the National University of Singapore (NUS) will be able to do just that when its University Town (UTown) opens.

UTown’s two new residential colleges will house some 1,200 undergraduates and 1,700 graduate students.

Professor Tan Eng Chye, NUS’ deputy president (Academic Affairs) and Provost, said those who wish to live in UTown must complete at least three academic modules as part of a residential college curriculum
